- Develop and grow a PhysiCell community
  - Help set the culture of our community
- Create fun models and useful utilities in the hackathon
  - Nucleate collaborations
- Identify leaders for a sustainable future

Overall Format

- Mornings: Sessions to learn PhysiCell
- Afternoons: Brainstorming & hackathon
- Evenings: At the discretion of you and your team
- Overnight: Watch asynchronous material (as needed)

- During Sessions:
  - Type questions in the chat window
  - We'll take periodic pauses for questions
  - Moderators will help read questions

- Breaks:
  - Use for getting meals, biobreaks, etc. as needed

Norms

- We want an inclusive culture where all feel welcome and ready to grow.
- Be respectful of your peers.
- Embrace and leverage your diverse viewpoints and skills.
- Ask questions! Ask for help if you need it!
- Be generous: share expertise, code, and time.
- Be rigorous. But ...
- Perfect is the enemy of good:
  - Try to get things right, but be willing to learn and iterate on a prototype.
- Let us know if there's something that can be better!
  - (And feel free to let us know we've gotten something right! ;-)

The case for cross-platform

- It's easy to believe that all science is done on Linux.
- Download stats tell a different story.
- Be mindful of cross-platform compatibility.

Today's Goals

- Get a first taste of Modeling in PhysiCell
- Learn Basic and Intermediate workflows
- Learn key concepts of phenotype
- Kick off brainstorming!
